Relevant Coursework:

Web Based ChatBot Development

- Worked with a team while using the agile scrum development model to create a chatbot to answer student questions about Siena's CSIS 011 and 010 coursework. Our website utilized natural language processing to tag keywords from queries which were then used to pull data from a database and return to user. Our implementation utilized bootstrap and PHP to generate a responsive, dynamic website

RAM Design

- Worked with a team on the design and implementation of a logical interface with a register chip. The interface allowed for interaction with the register that would allow for writing to memory as well as reading from it without compromising stored data.
